ALL MY CHILDREN

They watch and wait
 Though words were never uttered.
 The sense of voice heard seem vague and faint.
 Each one trample up and down,
 no worry, no concern.
 These are my children.

Time seems like nothing in the recesses of their minds as play time extends forever.

We delight at the merriment
 they sometimes make.

The pain at times they sometimes bring.
 However bitter sweet it may seem
 These are my children.

Love still exists though punishment is enforced
 Harsh words never once tear
 the walls of their hearts

For it is in their innocence that true love lies.
 As clear as the sky on a bright summers day

No indifference can take their joy away.
 These are my children.
